Background

Community engagement and collaboration are a hallmark of her work experience. Her skills and dedication to creating impact led her to manage a national youth program at the National NAACP ACT-SO and spearhead a summer youth program at a community college. Most recently, she has partnered with grassroots leaders, local businesses, volunteers, and community partners to leverage community resources and knowledge for maximum use and impact.

Monteiro completed her Bachelor of Science in Public Relations from James Madison University. She holds an MBA from Wake Forest University and conducted professional development courses at Harvard University. Committed to giving back, she has volunteered her time and skills to Forsyth Technical Community College's Small Business Center, the National Black Theatre Festival, and other local organizations.
